BIOGRAPHY

Sam Barfoot is a transactional real estate lawyer. He represents real estate investment trusts, private equity funds, developers and institutional and entrepreneurial clients in connection with their commercial real estate deals, which range from commercial financings, joint ventures and restructuring to acquisitions, dispositions and leasing covering several asset classes.

Sam began his career as a litigation attorney representing commercial real estate clients in various dispute resolution proceedings, including state and federal court litigation, arbitration and mediation proceedings, and administrative agency review including property assessment and tax appeals. Sam's prior litigation experience allows him to better advise and position his clients in their transactional ventures from the negotiation phase of a project and throughout its lifespan.
